

THE 2024 ROBERTSON LECTURE

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Sylvain
Charlebois

Professor , Director , Agri-Food Analytics Lab,
Dalhousie University

The Robertson Lecture is named in honour and remembrance of Dr. Bev Robertson, was made possible by a generous donation from Dr. Bev Robertson, his wife Elaine, and their family. The 2024 lecture is part of the University of Regina's 50th Anniversary year of celebrations.

FROM FARM TO FORK: SASKATCHEWAN'S ROLE IN THE FUTURE OF FOOD SECURITY AND INNOVATION

Join us at the 2024 Robertson Lecture featuring Sylvain Charlebois, who will discuss Saskatchewan's role in the evolving landscape of food production and distribution. Discover how emerging consumer trends, transportation logistics, and global events are reshaping our food systems. Delve into Saskatchewan's unique role in agri-food production, including its contributions to global food security, innovation and the urban-rural food connection. Join us to explore the dynamic interplay between food policy, safety, and economics, and consider how food producers and policy makers from municipal, provincial and federal levels of government can better understand and navigate our food supply chain.

OCTOBER 16, 2024

7:00 - 8:30 PM (CST)

The 2024 Robertson Lecture will be a hybrid event. Those interested in attending this free lecture must register in advance.
